Background:

The global and European economy have been operating under increasingly unstable conditions for a considerable period of time. Initially prompted by the global financial and eurozone crises, they were later joined by the migration crisis, the turmoil of Brexit and the Covid pandemic as well as technological disruptions, calls for a green transformation of economies and geo-political tensions between China and the USA. More recently, the growing threat of inflation in times of high debt as well as the war in Ukraine and the economic sanctions imposed on Russia in response to it by Western economies have exacerbated the instabilities. How does this impact economic development of national economies, firm behaviour, international business relations and what are appropriate economic policy responses at the national, European and global level in such an unstable environment? These are leading questions to be discussed on this Polish-German conference with a special, but not exclusive focus on Germany, Poland and the Polish-German relations. Areas of interest are, among others, the following issues:

- COVID-19-induced structural changes in the economy
- Changes in international value chains and trade policy
- Inflation theory and anti-inflation policies
- Energy Policy
- The impact of economic sanctions and counter-sanctions
- Digitalization and EU competition policy
- Geo-economic developments and system competition, particular with regard to China and Russia

Call for papers

To address these issues, we invite scholars from economics, political science, and related disciplines as well as practitioners to discuss current challenges and dilemmas of economic policy in the prevailing unstable environment in particular from German, Polish and European perspectives. We explicitly encourage contributions of different theoretical and methodological background as well as of interdisciplinary character.

Conference structure and language:

The conference is open to discuss a broad spectrum of questions on the current economic and economic policy challenges from Polish and German perspectives. It will consist of a keynote speech, moderated plenary debates and topical sessions with presentations and discussions. The main language of the conference is English; a selected part is held in German.

Publications:

Conference contributors have two options to publish their articles:
